

TOP STORIES

First-Year Virgin
Saving Himself For
Girl Who Will Sleep
With Him

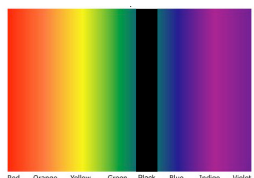

Majority of Sarcastic
Assholes Remember
Their First Beer

UGuide Sees
Image of Thomas
Jefferson on Grilled
Cheese

Visible Light
Spectrum To Now
Include Token
Black Color

Red Orange Yellow Green Black Blue Indigo Violet

HOMELESS GUY ENTERS 3057TH DAY OF 'OCCUPY THE CORNER'

AFTER NINE YEARS of occupying the sidewalk next to Boylan Heights, local homeless man Tony Peterson's existence is now being regarded as one of the most dedicated, long lasting protests in Charlottesville history. The vagrant has shown absolutely no signs of letting up, and is apparently so committed to his cause that he has not even had the time to shower or brush his teeth in two years.

"These days, the top 99% don't even care about the 1%," remarked sympathetic Politics Honors major Joey Lidell, gazing with adoration as Peterson puffed a cigarette he took from a student. "He is out here for the people, that's what it's all about. The people."

Eschewing traditional Occupy signs like "Greed is Bad" and "Where's my Bailout?"

Peterson instead has taken a different approach with signs that actively seek wealth redistribution, including "Anything Helps" and "Need Money 4 Beer."

"I think the movement has been a real success," added Lidell. "Just this morning he redistributed a $5 bill from one student, and half of a sandwich from another."

It is unclear when this protest will cease, but for now experts say there is much the Wall Street protesters can learn from Peterson. His protest is said to at least have specific goals and has unarguably been a success at redistributing whatever is in the pockets of UVA students.

As of press time, Peterson could not be reached for comment as he was asleep in the Pita Pit bathroom.

FOOTBALL TEAM TAKEN OUT FOR ICE CREAM ANYWAY

AFTER A CRUSHING home loss to in-state rival Virginia Tech, a downtrodden Virginia football team found itself delighted to be treated to Baskin-Robbins by second-year coach Mike London. A visibly fired-up London repeatedly urged his squad that they did, in fact, deserve ice cream.

"Winners don't always win, winners try their very best," said Coach London, emphatically licking his triple-scoop Very Berry Strawberry waffle cone. "And winners, they get ice cream."

As fans looked on, London produced a plastic gold trophy engraved with the phrase "Football Champs" and hoisted it over his head. The gesture was met with roars of support from the crowd, the team raising their delicious frozen treats to the sky.

Sophomore quarterback Michael Rocco said he considers the game, and to a larger extent the season, a success. "Yeah, we lost, but we still get ice cream," he added, clutching one of the ninety-seven "game balls" London distributed to the entire roster of players and coaches. "They have 31 flavors here!"

"We may not have had the most points, but we definitely had the most heart," concluded the proud coach. "Now who likes pizza?"

JEFFERSON SOCIETY DEBATE ENDS IN BOURBON-INDUCED FISTICUFFS

LAST FRIDAY EVENING, the weekly meeting of the Ancient and Honorable Jefferson Literary and Debating Society ended in a brawl after members Roraig Finney and Owen Gallogly thought it wise to resolve a dispute with a test of physical prowess. After failing to reach a conclusion about whether the lower-class should bear “all of” or “most of” the tax burden in American society, the two strapping, young stalwarts found one another to be most disagreeable and, drunk on potent spirits, challenged one another to a bout of fisticuffs.

“Why, I could not believe the tenacity of that scoundrel!” remarked Owen, still riled up and quite disheveled from the altercation. “I find him to be a braggart and a ruffian!”

“I’ve never trusted the rascal,” claimed Roraig. “In all my years I’ve never encountered such an uncouth simpleton!”

The two exchanged blows outside Jef-erson Hall in the wee hours of the morning, coming to a standstill with the issue unresolved. However, members report seeing Owen slap Roraig with a glove, indicating that perhaps the lad will avenge his honor with a duel before sundown.

The one and only
Jack Wills

Get trapped in our closet

DEATH OF PRETTY BLONDE GIRL OVERSHADOWED BY DEATH OF PRETTIER, BLONDER GIRL

THE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY is reeling today after the tragic death of Kelly Hastings and the even more tragic death of Rachel Thompson. Dozens of students witnessed the bizarre series of accidents Monday evening as Kelly and Rachel were struck just a few minutes apart by the same car on West Main Street.

Kelly, a third-year Politics major, was on her way to a Tri-Sig date function while Rachel, a fourth-year Politics Honors major, was heading to a Tri-Delt date function at the time of the accident.

According to one eyewitness, “When that car tragically struck that one girl, I was greatly saddened. But then that same car even more tragically struck that other, prettier girl, and I was even more greatly saddened.”

Rumors continue to circulate that a combination of foul play and mistaken identity were responsible for the deaths, despite police reports to the contrary. In an attempt to end the speculation, Chief of Police Michael Gibson released the following statement this morning:

“The chance of confusing the two was slim at best. Although both girls were wearing the same dress at the time, eyewitnesses report Rachel looked way better than Kylie. And while both were technically blonde, forensic teams have concluded that Kylie’s hair was really more of “sandy” color compared to Rachel’s lustrous platinum.”

According to the official report, the driver of the vehicle struck Rachel while attempting to flee the scene of striking Katie. Overcome by guilt, he stopped and dialed 911 twice: once to report striking Rachel, then again 5 minutes later when he remembered Kathy, who also might be hurt.

STUDY SHOWS 100% OF PEOPLE WHO TAKE DRUGS DIE

SCIENTISTS FROM THE National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) have released a ground breaking new report that sheds further light on the apparent link between drugs and certain death. The report represents the culmination of a multi-decade study wherein a group of 500 subjects were surveyed annually to see whether they had tried drugs and/or died in the past year. Of those who tried drugs, all eventually died.

SCIENTIFIC BREAKTHROUGH ENDS BELOVED STUDENT PHILANTHROPY

MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS AND patients worldwide are rejoicing after scientists at the National Institutes of Health announced the discovery of a long awaited cure for Parkinson's disease. In the U.S. alone, officials estimate that the treatment will save 60,000 lives and over 25 billion dollars in hospital expenses each year. Hopeful sufferers have already begun lining up outside clinics nationwide in anticipation of regaining full control of their motor and cognitive functions.

"Okay, so what are we supposed to do with all these t-shirts?" demanded third-year Pancakes for Parkinson's volunteer Zach Scharf, noting that the discovery will come at the expense of one the school's most cherished fall traditions. The astounding medical breakthrough has reportedly rendered several large griddles and 500 boxes of Bisquik completely unusable.

"Thousands of undergraduate students have lost the opportunity to enjoy piping hot, delicious pancakes with their peers," said Pancakes public relations chair Erica Barnes. "I mean, yeah, we're happy for the victims, but I spent a ton of time advertising for this event."

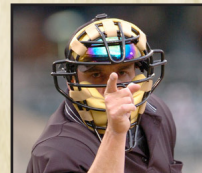

Hoping to recapture the classic combination of debilitating illnesses and breakfast foods, the organization has already proposed several ideas for a new event, including "Waffles for West Nile Virus" and "Rice Cakes for Restless Leg Syndrome."

Who Are We Dance Floor Making Out With?

- 13% High school senior who thinks we are Dean of Admissions
- 12% Dean of Admissions
- 14% 9 DZs
- 21% Drawing of face on hand
- 25% Future mother of our children
- 36% If by 'making out', you mean 'fingerbanging', then your mom

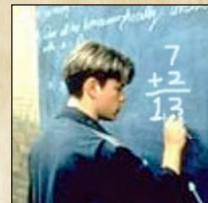

News in Brief

IM Softball Game Just Became World Fucking Series, Apparently

Hook-up Buddies Find at Least They Have Current Sex Position in Common

Genius Janitor Mathematician Actually Just Janitor

St. Elmo Hall To Offer Early Decision Option For New Rushees

Dubstep Artist Cites Madonna, Beethoven, Trash Cans Falling Over as Source of Inspiration

Fourth-Year and Morgan Stanley Now Linked-In Official

Pageant Winner Won't Put Out Until Third Play-Date

Sullivan Eats Fat Joke Before Yellow Journal Can Publish It

Smiling Minority Student is Totally Going to Appear on Admissions Brochure

FIRST-YEAR REALLY KNOWS A BROTHER

FIRST-YEAR IAN FLYNN was unable to gain entrance to Kappa Sigma's annual Boone's and Balloons party this Friday despite knowing brother Mike Donovan very well. Flynn, who went to preschool with Donovan, was unsuccessful in his attempt to convince the brothers working the door that he should be allowed in based on their 15 year friendship.

Throughout the prolonged negotiation, Flynn displayed substantial knowledge of Donovan, recounting several embarrassing anecdotes from summer camp and accurately listing Donovan's favorite music, movies, and places to go when he wants to be alone. After outlining Donovan's tumultuous middle school years and preference for brown-haired girls with hazel eyes, Flynn grabbed one of the brother's sharpies and sketched a floor plan of Donovan's two-story brick house in Redding, Massachusetts.

Despite demonstrating a deep and meaningful friendship that helped Donovan cope with his father's crippling descent into alcoholism following a horrific car accident that bound his sister to a wheelchair forever, the brothers remained unimpressed.

"Who, Mike? Everyone knows Mike," said the brother at the door. "You're gonna need to get him to come out here or something."

TOP STORIES ON theyellowjournal.com

FRENCH MAJOR STUCK
IN CUL-DE-SAC JOB

TOWNIE JUST
WANTS TO DANCE

DEAN GROVES
EMBRACES MALE
STUDENT BODY

'HOOS FOR SKEPTICISM' DOUBTS IT WILL BE SUCCESSFUL

DANMO SURPRISED
TO FIND HIS NAME
RYHMES WITH
"STUDCO"

FIRST-YEAR PANICS,
SIGNS LEASE TO PILE
OF SCRAP METAL

JULIAN BOND HAPPY TO SEE CLASS SIT-IN TURN INTO CLASS BOYCOTT

CIVIL RIGHTS PIONEER and African-American History professor Julian Bond wiped a single, solitary tear from his eye last week after completing a lecture to an empty classroom, witnessing what he calls "One of the greatest acts of civil disobedience [I] have ever experienced." The former NAACP chairman expressed his happiness that the students were finally applying what they learned in class and standing up against what they didn't believe in: his circular lectures and unfair grading policy.

First-year Adam Sawyers began the boycott during the second week of school after his alarm clock failed to go off, causing him to miss class. Soon after, the rest of the students began boycotting as well, especially after getting their midterm scores back and realizing everything said in lecture was taken straight from the book.

"I mean, the class blows," remarked one student in the course. "There really isn't even a point in going. All the lecture slides are on Collab anyway."

After completing his final lecture to the empty classroom, the man who once secured equal rights for millions paused to stop and bask in the silence, smiling to himself as he remembered that after next week's final the students would be free at last.

ORGANIC CHEMISTRY NEARS GREEK WEED-OUT GOAL

DESPITE A SLOW start, UVA's Organic Chemistry program is on track to achieve its federally-mandated Greek dropout quota for fall of 2011. With the final exam still looming, the Chemistry Department only needs 5 more members of the Greek community to give up on medical school and switch to either finance or marrying someone in finance.

Organic Chemistry was created by Congress in 1975 in order to stem the rising tide of Greeks joining the medical community and the ensuing dramatic increase in fatal medical accidents.

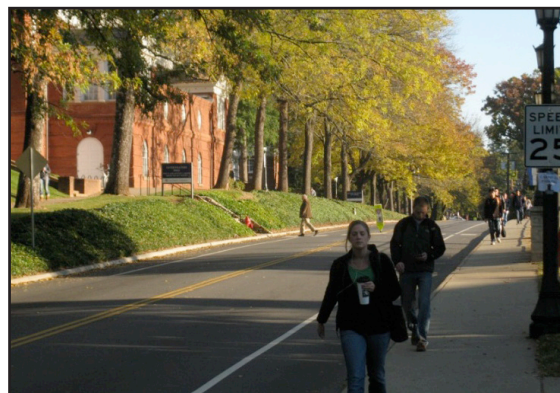

"Once being a doctor became a position of wealth and prestige, status-obsessed white people flocked to the profession," said Dr. Niels Rutherford, founder of the Organic Chemistry movement. "Patient care suffered almost immediately. Deaths due to operating under the influence doubled during the 1950s, while over 30 tons of prescription drugs went missing in 1969 alone."

Lawmakers were ultimately compelled to act by a series of highly publicized scandals in the early 1970s. In 1972, several doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital were forced to resign after they refused to operate on an accident victim until he shot-gunned a beer. "Less than a week later, a patient was diagnosed as a 'nerd' and expelled from the emergency wing of Johns Hopkins," recalls Dr. Rutherford.

Despite achieving success at UVA and around the country, the future of Organic Chemistry is uncertain. Opponents argue that the program is too expensive and has only succeeded in moving Greeks into more damaging careers, like politics and I-banking.

RUGBY ROAD RANKED NATION'S WEALTHIEST SLUM

A NEW SET of rankings by the US News and World Report has placed UVA's Rugby Road residence area in the Top 25 for both 'America's Best Neighborhoods for Young Adults' and 'America's Most Blighted Slums'. Bounded by Emmet Street to the west and 14th to the east, Rugby Road consists of the major Greek houses and the sprawling network of condemned apartment buildings that surround them.

"We didn't anticipate a lot of overlap between the two lists," said US News and World Report editor Rick Longwell. "There aren't many neighborhoods with 80% unemployment and 2.3 MacBooks per person. Frankly, a lot of it doesn't make sense. Wouldn't the roof leaks ruin all the HD televisions? And if everyone is dressed like they're on a yacht, why do they drink like they're homeless?"

According to US News and World Report, Rugby Road is the only place in the world with over 250 BMWs and 4,000 empty bottles of malt liquor. "In the end, we just decided to go where the data takes us," said Longwell as he sidestepped a blazer-wearing student peeing off the top of Beta Bridge.

CavMan Refuses To Acknowledge Illegitimate
Son, CavBoy

Overzealous Student Actually Bikes To Uganda

Ask Pat Lampkin...

Dear Pat Lampkin,

My boyfriend and I have been going through some tough times recently, because of his mother. She's a very old-fashioned type who loves to dote over him and she's always so openly critical of me. The worst part is, my boyfriend always rushes to her defense. Should I feel threatened by his mother?

-Hopeless in Hereford

Dear Hopeless,

When you are intoxicated your impaired judgment places you at a much greater risk for the following: injuries, sexual activity that is later regretted or deemed to have lacked consent, and a police citation. Plan not to drink or set a drink limit for yourself and stick to it.

Dear Pat Lampkin,

I fear my best friend's drinking is really sidetracking her from her goals and I really don't know how to help her. At the beginning of the semester she was getting straight A's but now she just blacks out in the middle of 14th Street most nights. How can I approach her, showing I am concerned but also not trying to offend her?

-Confused in Cauthen

Dear Confused,

Develop your own plan for staying safe. Lock your doors and windows. Do not walk alone at night. When you go out, especially to parties, develop a plan with your friends for getting there and getting back safely.

Dear Pat Lampkin,

Last week, I fear I unleashed the power of Zoltar! I am low on energy and the Unholy Horde is already beginning to stir. How can I mend the fabric of space-time before hellspawn overrun this dimension?

-Boggled in Brown College

Dear Boggled,

If you are aware of incidents that should come to the attention of University authorities, or if you would like to verify information you have heard, please call the Office of the Dean of Students or University Police.

Pat Lampkin is UVA's Vice President and Chief Student Affairs Officer and nationally syndicated advice columnist. Her advice column runs daily in The Yellow Journal.

News In Brief

Sabato Identifies Bonnycastle as Swing-Dorm in Upcoming StudCo Election

'Beyond Coal' Pushes Santa To Give Solar Panels To Naughty Children

Poorly Placed "That's What She Said" Joke Reveals Student's Psychopathic Nature

UVA Franchise at Wise Not Meeting Expectations

FIRST-YEAR ACCIDENTALLY ASSIGNED RABID PACK OF DOGS AS ROOMMATE

FIRST-YEAR CAMERON Becker was admitted to Student Health yesterday and diagnosed with an advanced form of rabies after receiving a roaming pack of feral dogs as his roommate. Despite informing his friends, Resident Advisor, and the Department of Housing and Student Life of his unfortunate situation, his pleas were ultimately shrugged off as merely exaggerated roommate complaints.

"Cameron was always complaining about how they left empty cereal bowls everywhere, never closed the door when a girl was over, and bit him on the face and legs repeatedly," said suitemate Ben Shaw. "I was like, we all have roommate problems, man. Just because they leave piles of clothes everywhere and aren't domesticated doesn't mean I want to hear about it."

The Department of Housing and Student Life commented that they try their best to pair roommates based on their responses to a compatibility survey.

"Both Becker and the feral dogs reported that they get up early in the morning, are non-smokers, and need extra space," said Housing Dean Gerald Steel. "Though we try our best to match up students, sometimes things just don't work out."

Becker could not be reached for comment after reportedly developing lockjaw, though the two parties seem to have patched things up after the rabid pack of dogs left a dead squirrel for him on his bed.

GRAND BIG NOT DOING SO WELL THESE DAYS

SIGMA KAPPA BIG sister Holly Phillips and her little Courtney Maloney have known for a while that sooner or later they'd have to seek new arrangements for Grand Big Kaitlin Michaels. But when the beloved older sister lost control of her motor and speech functions last Friday at a date function, they knew it was time to address the fact that Grand Big just isn't as able as she used to be.

"Living in a sorority house just isn't going to be good for her in the near future," said

Holly, as she wiped a tear from her eye. "She has so many memories in that place, and it's going to be tough to get her to leave."

Friends and family have suggested that the best option for Kaitlin would be a nice place of her own in Northern Virginia or possibly New York, where she would even be able to get a job to keep her occupied. Plans have already been made to move Kaitlin out of the sorority house as early as May.

"Even though she won't be around much longer, I know that deep down she's still the same Grand Big," said Courtney. "I'll always enjoy hearing her stories about the good old days, when [John] Casteen was President and she somehow managed to get by with just an iPhone 3."

GAY AGENDA ENTERS UVA CLASSROOMS

MEMBERS OF THE College Republicans have filed a formal complaint with the Board of Visitors after observing what they believe to be a 'gay agenda' all over Grounds. While it is well known that the gay agenda has long been present in women's studies and French language courses, this past semester it has even been seen in astronomy and finance classes, which is unsettling to some students who see the presence of the agenda as an attack on their traditional beliefs.

"If we allow a gay agenda into our beloved university, what's next?" posed College Republicans president Abbey Hendricks, "A socialist agenda? A polygamist agenda?"

Proponents of diversity at the University have already responded to the initial complaint with their own letter. "We welcome all types of agendas here on Grounds," explained Student Council Vice President Whit Hunter. "We are surprised that there has been this much backlash against the 7.5x10 inch planner, especially considering that it was created this way and never had the choice of becoming a gay agenda or not."

RUSH PHI PSI

Spectacular House.

Improving Brotherhood.

PARTY KEG! BEER DRINK! DANCE KISS! ROOF BALCONY!

Hey first-years! The brotherhood of 133 Madison Lane cordially invites you and your entire first-year suite to a dirty-rush beer pong night this Thursday, Dec. 8 at the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity house. We'd love to see you come out!

But don't come out if you don't like this stuff:

Beer, Thursday, Fraternity, Drink, Big House!

2nd and 3rd year DG's will also be in attendance until they go to bars, or other frats!*

CHRISTIAN GROUP PETITIONS TO BRING BACK EASTERS

MEMBERS OF THE Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship are lobbying the Sullivan administration in hopes of bringing back Easters, the infamous all-day riot once called "the best party in America" by Playboy magazine. The event was discontinued in 1982 for health, safety, and liability reasons, but Chi Alpha aims to bring the iconic festival back.

"It sounded so neat," says founder Rachel-Ruth Hopewell. "Apparently throngs of people would make the long journey to Charlottesville to celebrate the resurrection of our Lord. Some pilgrims came from as far as California to gather in His name!"

Fellow co-founder and Southern Baptist Matthew Gooding is taking a more aggressive stance. "This is just another example of the liberal establishment trying the silence the free exercise of Christianity in the name of political correctness," said Gooding. "They're not prohibiting Hanukkah parties, are they? Or telling the Buddhists to stop wearing their turbans?"

With over 10,000 signatures thus far and counting, Chi Alpha's petition has received an unexpected amount of support, though some students have raised concerns. According to Gooding, he was flyering for the group when one student asked, "Easters? Didn't someone almost die at Easters?"

"Yes," Gooding replied gravely. "His name was Jesus."

JOB MARKET UNQUALIFIED FOR GRADUATING LIBERAL ARTS MAJORS

WITH UNEMPLOYMENT ON the rise for recent college graduates, many experts have suggested that the job market is simply unqualified to employ graduating liberal arts majors. An increasingly fast-paced and ultra-competitive business workplace has left employers incapable of handling and slightly confused by graduates with English, Philosophy, and Linguistic-Anthropology degrees.

"Many firms lack the practical know-how and experience needed to accommodate these graduates," explained University Career Services advisor Denise Egan, "The vast majority of positions demand highly specialized skills, like attention to detail and math. There just isn't a place in the current economy for well-rounded, global citizens with an appreciation for T.S Eliot and the capacity to be deeply offended by practically anything."

Despite an ability to quote historical references directly from Wikipedia and an aptitude for inferring what Ulysses is about from reading SparkNotes, liberal arts majors have found the market doesn't have the crippling labor shortages necessary to find them a job. Some have even accused the market of apathy in regards to whether its new employees have even "found themselves" or not.

"Companies are simply not ready to face the extensive demands of these newly-graduated students," Egan continued, "In retrospect, the market probably should have evolved a little less quickly, or at least chosen different career paths to offer."

The Cav Daily

YIJ

Who'd you rather join?
Join the Yellow Journal
Apply online:
www.theyellowjournal.com